Anna Keighley is a leading expert in the recovery of criminal assets, with a specialised focus on proceeds of crime arising from financial and organised crime. Her practice spans both national and international legal landscapes, providing expert counsel in complex cases involving serious financial crime, civil fraud, and asset recovery.

With a strong reputation for her work in criminal, civil, and appellate courts, Anna regularly acts as counsel for key agencies such as the CPS and SFO. She is also a trusted advisor and advocate in restraint, confiscation, variation, enforcement, and receivership proceedings under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (POCA), the Criminal Justice Act 1988 (CJA), and the Drug Trafficking Act 1994 (DTA). Additionally, she represents clients in judicial review proceedings related to proceeds of crime.

Anna is frequently instructed by a diverse range of clients, including prosecutors, foreign governments, defendants, receivers, and third parties in high-stakes litigation. She is also a specialist appointed Counsel for the CPS and the SFO in the field of proceeds of crime and has earned recognition for her niche expertise. Her extensive experience also includes intervening in civil fraud and family proceedings and representing clients in proprietary claims.

A respected contributor to legal scholarship, Anna is a contributing author to Mitchell Taylor and Talbot on Confiscation and the Proceeds of Crime (Sweet & Maxwell) and has lectured on proceeds of crime law both in the UK and internationally, contributes to the Home Office development in this field of law and formerly ran education events for the Female Fraud Forum.

She is frequently called upon to offer legal insights and strategic guidance in complex legal matters, including those involving disclosure and legal professional privilege. Anna has advised on issues of privilege and waiver including as on-site LPP counsel and in cases involving large-scale document reviews, such as Operation Steamroller, a £70m share sale fraud investigated by the SFO.

From 2015 to 2020, Anna served as a Financial Ombudsman, resolving and making legally binding decision in complex banking and credit disputes.

With a career marked by high-level legal expertise, a track record of successful outcomes, and a commitment to upholding the integrity of the law, Anna Keighley is one of the leading figures in proceeds of crime litigation, trusted by clients and agencies alike for her comprehensive legal acumen and strategic counsel.

Bribery & Corruption

Anna is instructed by the Foreign Office's SIPT in the prosecution of attorneys and former government ministers of the Turks and Caicos Islands for £100m plus bribery, corruption and money laundering (R v Misick and others). This is a long running and complex case following a Commission of Inquiry and the suspension of the Government.

She also advises firms on their regulatory responsibilities and liability under the Bribery Act 2010

Fraud & Financial Crime

Anna's core practice invariably either involves or arises out of financial crime. In addition to the above examples include:

Defrauding regulatory authority (2019) – accusation of male fides of the Crown and complex PII issues.

Anna has also been instructed in civil fraud proceedings: – intervening in civil proprietary claim connected with High Court freezing order proceedings and resisting orders which compete with criminal asset recovery.

R v O'Sullivan and Kerr – instructed disclosure counsel in the prosecution of British attorneys in the Turks and Caicos Islands for Stamp Duty fraud in a $28 million dollar property transaction between U.S. nationals.

She is appointed to the Serious Fraud Office prosecution panel and specialist proceeds of crime panel.

LPP

Regularly instructed in the area of legal professional privilege. She advises parties on applicability and waiver of privilege.

She acts as independent counsel to identify material protected by legal professional privilege whether present during the search (of homes or solicitors offices) or reviewing large amounts of seized material – as in Operation Steamroller (a £70m share sale fraud) for the Serious Fraud Office.
